Next time your inner critic starts doubting on you, welcome him/her like an old friend that has come over for a cup of tea way too late at night/early in the morning. Give them a hug, have a cup of tea, then kindly show your inner critic the way out, reminding him/her that 'you got this'. Then continue on with whatever awesome thing it is that you were doing. And if there's a knock at the door? Ha! Yes, it's not that easy. But now, the next steps are up to you.

But your Inner Critic has got your best interests at heart. Yes, I'm ducking behind the screen right now to avoid the tantrums and rotten tomatoes that could be lobbed my way for saying that. The thing is that your Inner Critic's biggest job is to protect you. I know it might not feel that way when our hearts are singing the song of something exciting and that voice in our heads is ranting about why it's a crazy thing to do.
