Distance formula.
The formula for distance, if you know time (duration) and the average speed, is:

Read Free From Distant Days

$d = v \times t$. where v is the velocity (average speed), t is the time and d is distance, so you can read it as Distance = Speed x Time. The result will depend on the unit of the speed metric, for example if speed is given in mph, the result will be in miles, if it is
