The use of slave and forced labour in Nazi Germany and throughout German-occupied Europe during World War II took place on an unprecedented scale. It was a vital part of the German economic exploitation of conquered territories. It also contributed to the mass extermination of populations in occupied Europe. The Germans abducted approximately 12 million people from almost twenty European countries; about two thirds came from Central Europe and Eastern Europe. Many workers died as a result of the Concentration-camp detainees were monitored by the SS under inhumane conditions. They were “loaned out” to companies in exchange for money. In 1944, almost half of Daimler Benz’s 63,610 Daimler Benz employees were civilian forced labourers, prisoners of war or concentration-camp detainees. Daimler-Benz, owners of Mercedes, actually supported the Nazis prior to Hitler’s rise, taking out full-page advertisements in the Nazis’ newspaper, the Volkischer Beobachter, and utilizing slave ...

Continue Reading. Certainly, the exploitation of slaves was an integral part of the Nazi German economy during the 40s. It’s estimated that, at it’s height, forced labourers comprised 20% of Nazi Germany’s work force. 15 million people served as German slaves at one point or another. Many of them met horrible ends, often because of malnutrition and torture. 6.5 civilians were brought in to work at German factories, but this was just in addition to the
