Prince Rupert, Count Palatine (1619-1682), Soldier and patron of science; son of Frederick V, Elector Palatine and King of Bohemia and Elizabeth of Bohemia. Sitter associated with 45 portraits Artist associated with 1 portrait
The third son of Frederick V and Elizabeth, the exiled King and Queen of Bohemia, Rupert was a nephew of Charles I. A keen experimental scientist, he submitted a wide range of research including a water pump, navigational instruments, gunpowder, an early machine gun ...

Prince-Rupert, Count Palatine—Person—National Portrait---

Known as Rupert of the Rhine, he bears a striking resemblance to his cousin the Prince of Wales, later Charles II. The portrait is designed to place us at his feet, and yet he looks directly at us, a technique common in paintings of royalty. But his gaze doesn't seem to engage us – he is above us, a distant being to be admired and revered.

Prince Rupert of the Rhine—Wikipedia

The painting, commissioned by John Russell in the winter of 1645–6, is a unique artefact of the English Civil War. It shows a meeting between three Royalist commanders who were then based in Oxford, home to the royal court in exile. The group in the painting are Prince Rupert (the King's nephew), Colonel William Legge (Governor of Oxford) and Colonel John Russell (commander of the prince's elite Blue Coats).

Prince Rupert was born in 1619. He was the third son of Frederick of the Palatinate and Elizabeth, the daughter of James I. Shortly after Rupert was born, his father and mother were forced out of the Palatinate and he spent a great deal of his childhood in Holland. He became a strong and athletic teenager and was nicknamed 'Rupert-le-diable'.
